Determined Waymore Service owner shrugs off fire

BY KEVIN VINK
Review Staff

Rick Way is in good spirits, despite the fact that his shop, Waymore Service, caught fire on the evening of Monday, Oct. 15.

The building itself is still standing, but the smoke damage is extensive, and Way said that many of his electronics were destroyed among other things such as the engine hoists.

"I think I'm taking it fairly well," said Way. "It's just one of those things. I mean...we just have to keep going. You can't just give up and walk away."

"It'd be nice to say 'the heck with it', but no, I'm excited about the chance to do something different, make it better."

He noted that he will be taking the opportunity to renovate the shop a little bit, change up the front counter area, and make the layout more efficient.

In the meantime, two of his apprentice mechanics will be returning to school to upgrade their tickets.

"So hopefully we'll be back up and running when they're done school, or at least close."

He said the money in the cash register was damaged by heat, as well as many other things, and though the front counter portion of the shop was covered with soot, his records are safe.

However, the interior of the garage portion of the shop is a different story. The drywall near where the fire started was nearly gone, and there were two holes in the roof that were cut by the firefighters during the blaze. Soot also covered every inch of the garage, including two restored vehicles that were in the shop at the time.

Way's personal restoration project, a '55 Chevrolet Bel Air, was near where the fire started. Though it doesn't appear to be critically damaged, the paint peeled badly, and a new tail light, which he had recently installed, needs to be replaced again.

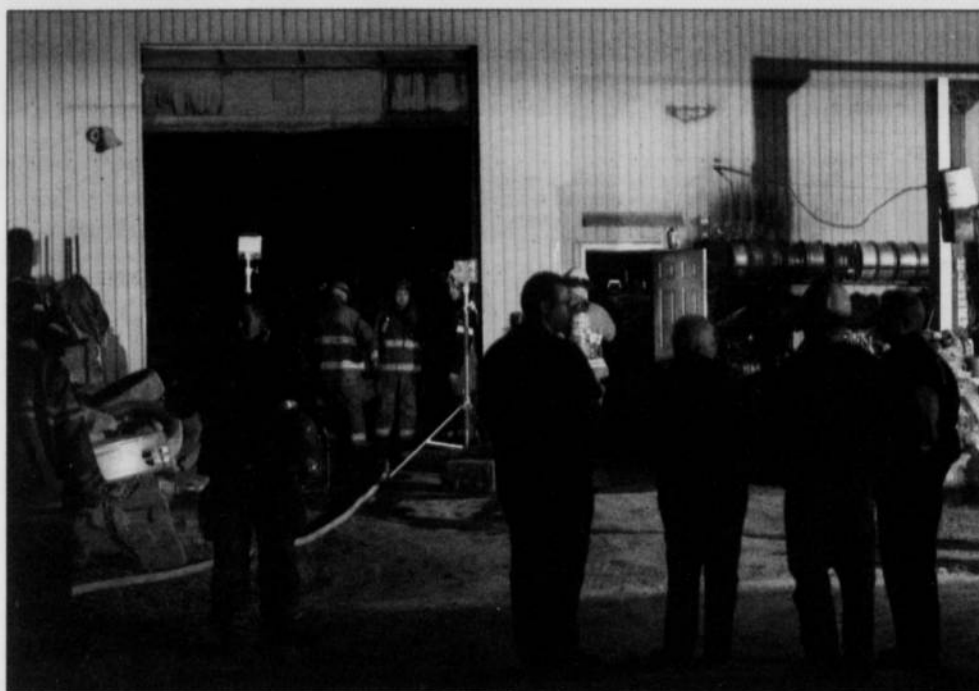

Way noted that the scrapyard is still operating, and though he can't do much in the shop, he is still open for business. The shop is still stripping scrap vehicles for parts and Waymore's towing operation is still going.

He was still waiting late last week to hear back from the insurance company, but he is hoping the shop will be up and running within two to three months.

"We're ready to get going and we can't do anything till they give us the go-ahead," he said, "and until we know what they're willing to pay for and what they don't want to pay for. You know, it's hard to spend money when you don't know how much you've got to spend to fix the place."

The insurance company usually waits on the provincial fire inspector, according to Cpl. Warren Wright of the Didsbury RCMP.

"What he does," said Wright, "is investigate the scene for the cause and origin of fires. If he determines it's suspicious, he'll turn over the investigation to the vested parties."

Wright noted that it is a routine procedure to have a fire inspector in to examine a fire scene. When the investigator has finished the report, added Wright, he will then advise the involved parties of the results.

Way noted that he will be taking care of the holes in the roof right away, and the plumber was slated to come in last Friday.

"The fire department did a hell of a job putting the fire down," noted Way, "and Personal Electric came in and had power in for us right away."

"We have just been overwhelmed with people offering to help. You wouldn't believe how many phone calls we've had. It makes you feel good."

Fire Chief Pat Dodman of the Didsbury Fire

Department, said that there were three fire departments that responded in total, including Olds and Carstairs.

"Our crew went in and knocked down the fire between the three departments," said Dodman. "We had about 25 firefighters and there were seven trucks."

He said because of the quick thinking of one firefighter who actually works at Waymore Services, they were able to unlock the fence to the yard and get right in beside the building so they could cut holes in the roof and put out the fire.

"The manager of Subway actually found out (about the fire)," he added, "and he made subs for all the guys that were on scene and just dropped them off and donated them."

Council-resident discussion

BY KEVIN VINK
Review Staff

The open-forum discussion put on by town council last week didn't attract as many people as organizers had hoped, but the group of about 24 people that did come out engaged in discussion about the town's strategic plan.

Attendees had the opportunity to voice their opinions on the 2011-2013 plan, and were also informed by council as to what steps are being, and have been taken, to complete the goals set out in the fall of 2010.

One woman who attended said that it was the most informative session she has ever had regarding the town.

Coun. Ray Anderson said "I think there's a lot lost in translation between councils and the people...I feel everyone else needs to be more involved, otherwise we're going to have that separation there."

The meeting came about after a report card was released which highlighted how town council was progressing in accomplishing its goals.

To summarize, council was graded based on the goals contained in the strategic plan, which then determined the overall grade for the given 'subject.'

They scored an 'A' in "Corporate Accountability," a 'C-' in "Encouraging Economic Development and Fiscal Accountability," a 'C-' in

"Building Community," and a 'B+' in "Communicating with Our Community Partners."

During the meeting, council went over each of the goals set out in the strategic plan, what they had accomplished, and what they were planning to do during their remaining time in office. A municipal election is scheduled for October 2013.

As the group moved through each goal, residents were allowed to ask questions of the council, which sat at the front of the room. A moderator was on hand to keep conversations orderly.

Mayor Wittal answered one inquirer that the number 1 priority for council is, and always has been, the sewer lagoon upgrades, which recently got a kickstart from the provincial government in the form of a near $6.2 million grant.

He noted that once the lagoon is upgraded, the town can start expanding both commercially and residentially.

Another topic of conversation involved Shantz Crossing, because some people are concerned about how much money is being spent on it.

Wittal stated in a recent interview that Shantz has actually been financed at prime, and payments only have to be made when the completed lots are purchased. This, he said, is a reason why the town went forward with the project.

He said at the forum that the town may not make back all of the money being invested in the project at first. However, he indicated that the long-term tax base it will provide is the most important aspect.

Attendees also had a chance to discuss the state of business health in the town and what council is doing about it.

Miki Town was also an item of contention, and many residents voiced their opinions that they don't think pursuing a relationship with a Japanese city is a just cause, considering the costs.

Mayor Wittal noted there is some potential with business as far as Miki town goes. He said that researchers in Miki Town are studying a special sugar and are considering bringing that technology to North America.

One resident asked, because it was such an informative session, why the town doesn't do it more often.

Coun. Peter Versluys said that the half hour prior to Committee of the Whole meetings is reserved for residents to bring issues and concerns forward, and also said that residents are allowed to be part of the committees commissioned by the town.

Wittal said, regarding the low level of attendance, "You're never going to get everybody, and if that's your goal, then you're just going to be frustrated. But if you can get some and you can get some positive (feedback), then go for it."

Zion Church bringing singer-songwriter Steve Bell to town

Over 850 million people in the world don't have enough to eat - something that Colin Creighton, associate pastor at Zion Evangelical Missionary Church in Didsbury, finds very disturbing.

"God doesn't want anyone to be hungry," he says. "As Christians, we have a responsibility to help."

Zion Church will be doing its part to help alleviate global hunger October 28, when it hosts singer-songwriter Steve Bell for a fundraising concert for Canadian Foodgrains Bank.

"In the Didsbury area, we have farmers who regularly raise money for the foodgrains bank through growing projects," Creighton says. "We are humbled by their commitment to help others. The concert is a way for those of us who aren't farmers to also lend a hand."

For Creighton, Bell is a great performer to share the message of helping others.

"Steve is well known for his invitational style that appeals to people from a variety of backgrounds," Creighton says. "His commitment to helping people who are poor shines through his music."

Concert-goers will also have an opportunity to participate in a postcard campaign sponsored by the foodgrains bank. Called a Recipe for Ending Global Hunger, the cards acknowledge the important role the Canadian government plays in alleviating hunger and encourages the prime minister to keep the needs of hungry people in mind when deciding how to allocate resources from Canada.

"We appreciate what the government is doing to help people who are hungry, and want to urge them to keep doing as much as possible to help," Creighton says.

The concert is also a bit of a homecoming for Bell, who is married to Nancy Traub of the Didsbury area.

The concert, which has free admission, begins at 7 p.m. An offering will be taken.

Canadian Foodgrains Bank is a partnership of 15 Canadian churches and church-based agencies working together to end global hunger.

Town doing better, say new projections

KEVIN VINK
Review Staff

The last time the town released its budget projections, it seemed like the Town of Didsbury was going to breach its debt ceiling of $13 million in 2013.

That has since changed, and Mayor Brian Wittal wanted to make sure that residents are aware of why exactly the story has changed so quickly.

For the year of 2012, the town's debt is close to $8.5 million, and for 2013, according to projections, the debt will peak around $9.5 million, but be paid back at an average of $800,000 per year, for the next six years, according to Nita Bartholow.

It may seem misleading at first. However, Wittal said that one of the main reasons is that the provincial government has agreed to give the town a grant of about $6.2 million to kick-start the sewer lagoon project.

Because the initial budget documents included the Town of Didsbury pitching in the initial funding, the new budget is radically different, because the provincial grants will pay for the first portion of the project.

Along with the much-debated Shantz Crossing, council has been putting money into many things, often taking on debt to fund the projects.

Wittal said that, in many cases, this comes down to spending money at the right time.

"It's managing it smartly," said Wittal. "As long as you can manage and pay your debt, how's the best way to use that debt to its maximum potential? When interest rates are low, should you be taking your debt limit right to the roof and utilizing it? Possibly."

He said it is key to make sure there is wiggle room, in case something big that requires immediate attention does pop up, but he said the situation needs to be examined from a future-cost perspective.

"Things are quiet right now," he noted. "And now's the time you can get good deals building things, as far as costs and everything else."

"Do you do it now, or do you wait a couple years, see what's going to happen with the economy, and then step into it with everybody else and pay twice as much as you would have previously?"

He noted that same situation happened with the road replacement between AG Foods and the Mountain View Credit Union. The town waited too long to put out tenders for the work, said Wittal, and it ended up costing nearly a million dollars per block to rehabilitate the section of road.

All of these factors play into it, he said, and though there is guesswork involved, when the economy goes up, prices follow closely behind.

"You're guessing as to what may happen, but we're seeing it now, the prices of things going forward."

He noted that it's a good thing the town tendered for the sewer lagoon when it did, because the contract has already been written up and agreed to, so the relatively low cost they snagged to do the work is locked in.

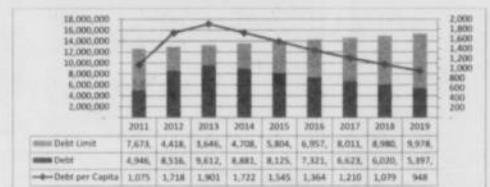

A year from now, he said, contractors will probably be charging double what they did on that particular contract, for the exact same thing.

"That's free market. So council is trying to smart-manage our money around that, and a lot of it has got to do with things like timing. When you step into these things? When you're getting bang for your buck."

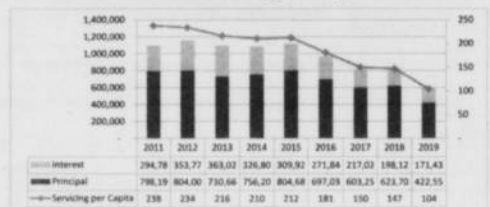

"We're trying to take your money and trying to use it the best we can," said Wittal. "If council can take your tax dollar and get a grant fund to get another dollar to match it, like for the sewer lagoons, hey, we just turned that one dollar into two."

"If it means we have to borrow funds for that...would you not do that?"

Bullying solutions must include making bullies pay

DAN SINGLETON

The recent tragic death of Amanda Todd – a B.C. teen who committed suicide following physical abuse and Internet intimidation – has highlighted the need for new solutions to the modern-day bullying that continues to impact communities across Canada, including right here in West Central Alberta.

Todd took her own life after posting an Internet video highlighting her plight. The video has garnered worldwide media attention, prompting debate and discussion at the national, provincial and local level.

Finding ways to stop bullying has been something stakeholders have been struggling with for many years.

In the past, schoolyard bullying was simply a matter of catching the bully or bullies in the act and confronting them face to face about their actions.

Today the phenomenal growth of email and other social media, particularly by young people, has created new avenues for bullies to operate behind a virtual screen of anonymity.

It's time for new anti-bullying strategies to meet the new generation of bullies.

As the school level, the Alberta Liberals have come up with one good solution – stop tolerating bullies altogether.

"A message needs to be sent to bullies – this kind of behaviour is unacceptable and Albertans won't tolerate it," says Liberal education critic Kent Hehr. "All too often the focus seems to fall on the victim. Let's flip it around and make sure that every schoolyard bully knows that we have a zero tolerance policy for any type of bullying."

At the national level, MP Dany Morin has put forward a private member's bill calling for a national anti-bullying strategy.

"It's a problem that's national and that's unfortunately growing," Morin told the House of Commons. "Yes, I was bullied when I was young, except that in my time there was no Facebook or social media."

MPs of all stripes should be encouraged to follow Morin's lead and bring forward a national strategy aimed at ending bullying.

At the community level, ordinary citizens should be encouraged to follow the lead of the Alberta mom who recently helped track down an Ontario man who posted hateful comments following Amanda Todd's death – leading to the man's immediate termination from his job.

Whether it is face to face or through social media, bullying is a dangerous crime that destroys the lives of innocent people, including vulnerable youngsters such as Amanda Todd.

As such, it's high time for the former message that "Bullying isn't right so please don't do it" to be replaced with a new message: "If you bully, you'll pay hard for it."

The other Cuban Missile Crisis

GWYNNE DYER

This month is the 50th anniversary of the Cuban Missile Crisis (16-28 October, 1962), so we're going to hear a great deal about the weeks when the world almost died. But the past is a foreign country, a place where everything was in black-and-white and men still wore hats, so it's just scary stories about a long-gone time. Or so it seems.

The outlines of the tale are well known. Soviet Premier Khrushchev moved Soviet nuclear missiles to Cuba in October, 1962, to deter the United States from attacking the island – but from Cuba the Soviet missiles would be only five minutes away from their targets in the United States. That was intolerable to the US military, and on 22 October President John Kennedy went on television and warned the American public of the risk of nuclear war.

He then declared a naval blockade of Cuba, saying that he would stop Soviet ships carrying further missiles from reaching Cuba by force if necessary. That would mean war, almost certainly nuclear war, but at least the blockade gave the Russians time to think.

The Soviet leaders were now terrified by the potential consequences of their own actions, and looking for a way out of the crisis.

So after a few harrowing days a deal was done in which the Soviet SS-4 missiles would be withdrawn from Cuba in return for a public promise by the United States not to invade Cuba.

The crisis was officially over by Oct. 28.

There is something missing from this narrative, however. The crisis did not really end on 28 October. A new book by Sergo Mikoyan, "The Soviet Cuban Missile Crisis: Castro, Mikoyan, Kennedy, Khrushchev, and the Missiles of November", reveals that it extended all the way through November.

US intelligence was unaware that along with the SS-4s, the Soviet Union sent more than a hundred shorter-range "tactical" nuclear missiles to Cuba.

Fidel Castro was in a rage about having been abandoned by his Soviet allies, so to mollify him Khrushchev decided to let him keep the tactical missiles.

But giving Fidel Castro a hundred nuclear weapons was a recipe for a new and even bigger crisis in a year or two, and Khrushchev's deputy, Anastas Mikoyan, who was sent to Cuba to tell Castro the news, quickly realized that it was madness.

The second half of the crisis, invisible to the Americans, was a month-long struggle by Mikoyan to pry Castro's fingers off the hundred tactical nuclear missiles. In the end, he only succeeded by telling Castro that an unpublished (and in fact non-existent) law forbade the transfer of Soviet nuclear weapons to a foreign country. In December, they were finally crated up and sent home.

So it all ended happily – but the whole world could have ended instead.

As Robert McNamara, Kennedy's defence secretary in 1962, said 40 years later, "we were just plain lucky in October 1962 – and without that luck most of you would never have been born because the world would have been destroyed instantly or made unlivable in October 1962."

Then he said the bit that applies to us. "Something like that could happen today, tomorrow, next year. It will happen at some point. That is why we must abolish nuclear weapons as soon as possible." They are still there, you know, and human beings still make mistakes.

RCMP notice an increase in employment scam activity

BY CHRISTI ALBERS-MANICKE
For the Review

Didsbury RCMP say they are seeing a spike in online scam activity in the area and are urging employment seekers to remain vigilant while job hunting online.

Recently an individual came forward to RCMP, as the victim of an online secret shopper employment scam.

Businesses across Canada use mystery shopping to monitor service quality and many of those services advertise online for employees. In this particular scam, Sgt. Jeff Jacobson said the person answering the ad is sent a cheque or money order for them to use in their shopping evaluations.

The individual will then be told to cash the cheque and to deduct a percentage as their wage and then "evaluate" a specified service before sending the remainder of the funds back to the "employer" via a cash money transfer through a service like Western Union or Money Mart.

Jacobson says the original cheque the individual receives is fraudulent and connected to no sources of money and that the scam is a way of converting fraudulent cheques and money orders into cash, quickly and easily.

The most recent secret shopper victim lost $1,300 before alerting police to the suspicious activity.

Jacobson says there may be little chance of recovering those lost funds and that in most cases there is nothing the victim can do once the money is sent.

"Often the money is wired or shipped out of the country, making it difficult to trace," he says.

Transfer services are aware of fraudulent activity, and do take steps to try and prevent it but he says that quite often the person on the other end is running with fake identification and a fake name.

He says most people who fall victim to this kind of crime answered an online ad looking for a secret shopper and urges people to be mindful when seeking employment in certain areas, through certain platforms.

"I would urge individuals to be careful if they are looking to find employment or supplement their income through secret shopping," he said. "We've had a few people in the area become victims of fraud. The scam seems credible enough to the person doing it. The person thinks oh, perfect, I've found employment."

The Better Business Bureau (BBB) advises applicants to check the name of the business with the BBB, and to never pay money up front. A legitimate mystery shopping service will not charge money for materials, training or recruiting, the BBB advises. They also advise individuals to be cautious of any unsolicited emails offering "work from home."

Sgt. Jacobson says oftentimes, the elderly are easy targets for scam artists and that the RCMP want to stop the victimization of others.

He urges anyone who may have fallen victim to this or any other scams to come forward, and to not be embarrassed.

"This person is not the first to fall victim to this type of crime," he says. "These people are professionals and no one should feel any shame about coming forward."

Referees attempt to stop a fight between Mountainview Colts player Dennis Lawrence and a Three Hills Thrashers player during their game at the Didsbury Memorial Arena last Wednesday. The Colts won the game 7-3.

HALLOWEEN TRICK OR EAT - MOUNTAIN CLIMB

Help Brienne Byers with her "Mountain Climb" to reach AG Foods from the Train Station on October 31 to raise food for the food bank. Brienne will begin her climb at 8:00 am with a goal to reach AG Foods by no later than 3:00 pm. To help Brienne you can donate one can of food or $2 per sidewalk square.

At 4:30 Brienne is asking for volunteers to begin the official "Trick or Eat Drive". Come dressed up in your costume and knock door to door for donations. Each group will be assigned a section of the town and there will be drivers to pick up the donations. Prizes for best costumes, cake, and cookies will be served at AG Foods to conclude the evening.

Dragons beat Sundre Bison 40-9, going to final

BY KEVIN VINK
Review Staff

The Didsbury Dragons are going to the championship game after winning last Saturday's football game against the Sundre Capital Pressure Bison 40-9.

Despite below-zero temperatures and wind, the players fought hard for the opportunity to continue on to the final game of the season - the championship game.

"It was a really good win for us," said Dragons coach Mark Lefebvre. "We executed well on offence and we didn't have to hold anything back, no special plays or anything like that. We executed a lot of really good plays and then we were able to just handle them pretty good on defence.

He noted that the homefield advantage did play a big part in the victory.

"In a playoff game, it's a real solid thing to have the fans out there, freezing to death to support us," he said. "It was a cold day, cold wind out there and to have your home guys supporting you, it's a real positive thing, a 10th man on the field."

The location of the championship game wasn't set at press time, but Lefebvre said they will be playing against either Carstairs or Victory Christian School in Edmonton, depending on who wins that match.

Sundre Bison coach Don McCullough said "I think for the weather conditions, both teams played well. It was a good season for our guys and good luck to Didsbury next against whoever's in the finals."

Because they lost this game, Sundre is done for the season. McCullough added that his team played well, considering the circumstances, and he's looking forward to next year already.

"I think overall this season, we had our ups and downs, but I think near the end of the season we started to come together as a team. We'll have a good core of kids back next year so it should be good."

A Halloween Climb for Hunger

BY BRIANNE BYIERS
For the Review

This Oct. 31, help support your local food bank in a unique and fun way.

Come down to the front of the Didsbury train station to see Brianne Byiers climb for hunger. She will be 'mountain climbing' the sidewalk, one canned good at a time, all the way to AG Foods.

With a donation of one can of food or two dollars, Byiers will be able to scale one square portion of the sidewalk.

Preparations will begin at 7 a.m., and the expedition will commence at 8 a.m.

Her goal is to make it to AG Foods, the summit of this incredible feat, no later than 3 p.m. She can only make it there, however, with your support.

Donations can be made along the way, as Brianne climbs Didsbury's mountainous range with a shopping cart in tow.

Once AG Foods has been reached, regardless of how long the expedition will take, residents can join her and her team there at 3:00 p.m. for a ribbon-cutting ceremony and hot chocolate.

At 4:30 p.m. the group will head out into the community for the 'Trick or Eat' food drive, going door-to-door in their Halloween best, gathering food donations for the Mountain View Food Bank.

Any kids that feel that they are too old for traditional trick-or-treating, or any organizations that would like to participate, are welcome and needed to make 'Trick or Eat' a success. Participants are asked to register their groups ahead of time at TrickorEat.ca, however,

Byiers stressed that volunteers will not be turned away if they register the day of the event at the site before heading out.

Interested parties can come down to AG Foods between 4:30 p.m. and 7 p.m. to get their route and find their group.

'Trick or eat' will wrap up at about 8 p.m., with all food donations being dropped off at AG Foods.

All participants and volunteers are welcome to join in at any time during the night.

Don't forget to dress up in Halloween costumes. Prizes will be given to the best dressed.

Police briefs

Missing money

Sgt. Jeff Jacobson reported last week that a youth had recently found some money in town and turned it in to the RCMP detachment.

Jacobson didn't want to give out too many details, but is hoping that the rightful owner of the money will come forward with some identifying details so that it can be returned.

He described it as a smaller amount of money - under $1,000.

"To get it back," said Jacobson, "they would need to provide the amount, denominations, likely locations that they misplaced the money, and any sort of container, envelope, or wallet."

The finder, he noted, was a youth who was honest enough to bring it in.

"Ultimately if nobody claims it," he said, "the finder will keep the money."

Lock picking

On Oct. 4, between 4:30 p.m. and 2 p.m. the next afternoon, Jacobson said a black 2003 Dodge truck parked on the 1400 block of 21 Avenue was vandalized.

It was found with damage to the door lock and was reported to police.

"It appears someone may have been trying to gain access to the vehicle," said Jacobson. "Access was not actually gained."

House prowler

Owners of a house in the 100 block of Southridge Crescent believe someone was trying to gain unauthorized entry between Oct. 4 at 9 p.m. and the afternoon of Oct. 6.

The homeowner noticed that the screen had been pulled off their basement window, said Jacobson, and the window had been opened in an apparent attempt at a break and enter.

It was believed that no entry was actually made into the residence, he added.

Jacobson noted that a common practice is for prowlers to act like salespeople, going door to door, so he asks that if anybody saw anything or anybody suspicious to let the RCMP know.

Hefty fine

A Didsbury member of the RCMP was patrolling on 15 Avenue and stopped a vehicle for speeding, said Jacobson.

"The vehicle was unregistered and uninsured," said Jacobson. "It appears the driver was not properly licensed, and was also processed for impaired operation and will be facing charges of that as well."

He noted that potential fines will be up to the judge, but, if convicted, the driver will face fines upwards of $2,800.

Engel, Agnes Doreen (Boechler) Oct 11, 1930- Oct 18, 2012.

Agnes passed away peacefully on October 18, 2012 at the age of 82 in Didsbury, Alberta. She is now at rest in Heaven where she will be able to spread her angel wings and watch over all her family and friends. Agnes was born in Allan, Saskatchewan on the farm and had 10 brothers and sisters. Agnes moved to Calgary in 1958 where she worked for the telephone company, continued her love of dancing until she danced her way into the heart of her husband Horst Engel in 1961 whom she then married. They moved out to Neapolis where they revived an old cheese factory and ran a successful business for 36 years. Over the years she made many great friends in the neighbourhood and I know mom will miss the "get togethers" with them. She always loved a house full of people; in between the long hours at the cheese plant she always found time to raise her family and countless other nieces, nephews and many kids from other countries who spent extended time at her home. Agnes will be greatly missed by her husband of 51 years Horst Engel, children Bruce, Roger (Lori), Monique, grandchildren Amanda, Ashley (Justin), Max and Eric and was predeceased by her daughter Carmen (1966), sisters Irene, Veronica, Ann, brothers Bill, Ernie, Len, Leo and parents Frank and Ida Boechler. Survived by sisters Eleanor, Roma and Eva. Her daughter Monique looked after mom for the last couple of years until she could no longer and she was placed in long term care to be by her husband's side in March of this year. It was mom's wishes that there be no service or memorial and we are respecting that. We wish to thank the staff and volunteers at Unit 4, Didsbury long term care for the care you gave mom in the last 7 months she was with us and we are grateful she could spend that time with dad. In lieu of flowers donations can be made to Unit 4 in the Didsbury Long Term Care Facility.
